Foreword

Our Year Book

Although yielding reluctantly to our Successors
the privilege of upholding the principles of high honor
which we have striven jealously to guard, we hope that this tangible form of our Student Years may express the appreciation we have for the School and the pride we feel
in our mutual kinship

Maud Young

Maud Young

Thirty years ago, Maud Young chose teaching in our Brookline schools as the measure of her service to the community in which she grew up.

These years of quiet, faithful, and efficient helpfulness, both in night school and in Brookline High, will become our heritage and our tradition in June when Miss Young retires from active participation in the work of the school.

Each year for nearly a generation, our girls have gone forth from Miss Young's room with social and economic responsibility for the future in the spirit of high endeavor and sterling worth. Now Miss Young herself goes forth, still pioneering, companioned by the love of thousands of "her girls" and by the warm, deep admiration of her co-workers who will cherish always her abundant faith, her zealous endeavor, her forthright honesty, her indomitable courage.

To

John J. McGinnis

For your years of faithful service
  That our welfare might not lack;
As our friend and loyal comrade,
  We salute you, Mr. Mack!

For your everlasting patience,
  Always willing to come back
To supply our want or pleasure;
  We admire you, Mr. Mack!

For your loyalty to duty,
  Never swerving from the track;
Gently firm for all things righteous,
  We respect you, Mr. Mack!

For the many lives you've brightened
  We would build a golden plaque;
And inscribe upon its surface,
  "May God Bless You, Mr. Mack!"

To the Class of 1934

"We built a bridge of understanding thought
To This and Now, from days that long have been.
To show the goodly thing our fathers wrought,
And flood with light the paths that have been dim.

That You, with purpose clear and confident song
May build the bridge from Now to Far Away,
To something yet more noble, fair, and strong
Than ever the fathers dreamed it in their day."

Class President's Address

TEACHERS AND CLASSMATES:

On this festival evening, we, as a Class, are gathered together to enjoy the completion of our high school career. Let everyone here, therefore, look on the occasion with the mingled emotions appropriate to the event.

"With an auspicious and a dropping eye,
With mirth in funeral and with dirge in marriage
In equal scale weighing delight and dole."

Forget for the instant the stern strife awaiting on the morrow our heroic entrance into life's arena and let us relive the moments of our supreme satisfactions and poignant regrets in our brief but not inglorious past.

It is on this occasion that we as students desire to acknowledge our indebtedness to our school. In bearing our hard knocks with stoic fortitude we have ever been comforted by the knowledge that faithful are the wounds of a friend. The eulogy of the high school student to his benefactors can never be more sincere and appreciative than ours to you. These last four years of depression have matured our outlook on life to a degree not ordinarily reached by the high school senior and it is out of that full realization that we pay our tribute to your understanding and help.

One member of our class is not with us tonight. It is only fitting that while we are enjoying this farewell banquet, we pause a moment to honor the memory of Paul Kravit. He was one of our best and most promising students, and possessed with remarkable artistic ability. His memory will live ever in the hearts of his classmates.

Brookline High School is ranked as one of the best in the United States. Our own class record has been one to be proud of. It would not, therefore, be idle optimism nor boasting vanity to prophesy that some future gathering of this class will reveal each of us as good citizens, achieving success in his chosen field. We are:

"One equal temper of heroic hearts,
. . . strong in will
To strive, to seek, to find, and not to yield."

ELIOT N. SILVERMAN

Class Oration

. . . And the world's coarse thumb
And finger failed to plumb,
So passed in making up the main account:
All instincts immature,
All purposes unsure,
That weighed not as his work, yet
Swelled the man's amount;

Thoughts hardly to be packed
Into a narrow act,
Fancies that broke through language and escaped;
All I could never be
All, men ignored in me,
This, I was worth to God, whose wheel the pitcher shaped.

In these words Robert Browning has expressed his conviction that the world is prone to disparage the real worth of those whose value is intrinsic but obscured. Its superficial observation is insufficient to reveal the underlying aspirations of the earnest, often inarticulate, multitude, and yet if life is to have substance, we must learn to distinguish the genuine from the spacious; to discern real virtue whether it be hidden by a defensive pose or an uncongenial exterior. We are about to enter a world where, in all walks, professional or commercial, the personal element is becoming increasingly dominant. Accordingly, it is an essential part of our training to quicken our faculty of appraising this personal element.

The acquisition of such a faculty must accompany the accumulation of experience and the growth of wisdom. For this reason, Youth, in its immaturity, is apt to judge superficially; to be unduly impressed with the artificial, the obvious, and the glittering. Moreover, our point of view militates against judicial appraisals, since it is a self-centered point of view in which judgments are largely colored by the amount of pleasure or service to be derived from a given personality.

It is at this period of transition from high school to college or business that a very far-reaching development occurs. We first become acutely conscious of ourselves as distinct, separate, beings. In the words of the poet, we realize that were are . . . a final one:

> That yields no room for doubt or windy strife
> More certain than the blazing of the sun.

Concomitant with this newly-sensed consciousness of personality is the urge toward self assertion; the desire for influence and audience among our fellows. So strong is this urge, that, in order to satisfy it, we are tempted to violate the integrity of our true personality. To give the air of maturity of experience we assume the pose of rampant sophistication; to manifest superiority of intellect, we cultivate a devastating cynicism. But while we are thus gaining a following, we have atrophied our ability to select those who are worth our while, for a candid scutiny of ourself is a prerequisite of an authentic evaluation of others. Obviously he who regulates his conduct with an eye to its ultimate effect upon his comrades must connive at his own calculations. How can he hope to penetrate to the real in others? He is no longer capable of an accurate appraisal of another personality.

If we wish to preserve ourselves to the service of mankind, it is imperative that we guard the oneness of our being—we must be sincere. "Insist on yourself," says Emerson, "never imitate. Your own gift you can present every moment . . .; but of the adopted talent of another you have only an extemporaneous half-possession". Thus Emerson recognizes that nothing counterfeit can long endure or attract. It is in its natural spontaneity and genuiness that Youth prevails and claims its own.

> "To thine ownself be true,
> And it must follow, as the night the day,
> Thou canst not then be false to any man."

is oft-quoted advice which, if generally followed, might have rendered impossible the rather sad commentary contained in the lines of Browning quoted at the beginning of this address: that it is to his creator alone that man can hopefully look for a sympathetic and comprehending estimate of his deepest virtue and his highest aspirations.

Class Song

LAST trumpets sounding—
Last notes resounding—
We stand again beneath the tow'rs of Brookline's school.
Drum-beats fall muffled,
Our banner, ruffled
In the west wind, leads against the frowning host.

Now cohorts, turning,
See campfires burning
From this June day across the years in Brookline's halls.
Behold that beacon
We cannot weaken
When our vanguard clashes with the waiting foe.

Harvest

Noon

A slash of sunlight fell upon the slope
Sidewise, like Ceres' fingertip, to point
A prophecy of golden wheat, a hope
Of harvest plenty. Patternlike, a joint.

Of sunray fell where rows of seeds made lines
Even and bright upon the hill . . . He stood
Alone to view that fertile plain; the signs
Of that year's crop, he saw, and found it good.

Then wandering down into the valley, passed
His favorite poplar, passed the shed, discerned
That nearly every foot was sown, at last
Arriving at one bit of field unturned.

He absently bent down and sifted soil
To heal the gashes where the seed lay bare.
The sunlight slithered on that place where toil
Had filled the plain with promises and prayer.

Night

The storm had crept upon the shrinking plain
And bitten it with teeth of wind and fire,
Clawed and broken it, inflicted pain
On all the land, strew sedge and briar.
From each dim edge of valley to the hill,
Tempest had come in one short night; and brush
And weeds in scrawny heap and heap stretched still
And gray in utter desolation. Hush

And death lay on the storm-torn harvest field.
Beside a stricken poplar tree, as gray
And torn as all the waste beside him, kneeled.
A man, wide shoulders bent. The very way.

He propped his form against the mangled tree
Was pain. Four months before, he stopped to lean
Against the poplar, finding it hard to see
How anything could change that peaceful green.

Morning

The spring, that year, came soon and held good rain
And wheat field sun. The planting went ahead
With care and promise. The farmer sowed his grain
And walked his field once more with hopeful tread.

How We Shall Study the History of the Class of 1934

Members of the Class of 1934 have figured in the columns of that ultra-conservative newspaper, The Sagamore, for the last sixty-four issues. However, it will be impossible to mention the countless deeds of the students in this brief account of their stay in Brookline High School, and so, the authors, after poring through the official records of the school and the Sagamore, have gathered the more important events and have placed them in four classes, namely, political, social, cultural, and athletic.

The Great Exodus

On September 8, 1930, the great exodus from six grammar schools, bound together by the common bond of a desire for knowledge, wended its way to the great Halls of Learning. This populace soon became naturalized and within a month each member was given the privilege of citizenship.

The First Election

In early October thirty or more candidates were in the field for the four class officers. A heavy vote was cast by the newly naturalized citizens and Edwin R. Harley was elected president; Philip Baird, vice-president; Helenka Chmielinski, secretary, and Charles Pollina, treasurer. Marshals were elected in this same month, who, in turn, elected Frank Gardner to the Teacher-Student Council and Marjorie Gordon to the Court of Justice. President Harley was ex-officio member of both the latter bodies. With the officers elected, the class which was destined to be the greatest in the history of the Brookline High School, was on its way.

Evidences of High Scholarship

The Class of '34 astounded the faculty by their ability to learn and absorb, crowding the first honor roll to such an extent that the standards were raised during the second year. The progress made was typified in the person of Mr. Ernest R. Caverly, fellow-member and head-master, who at the end of the first year was raised to the office of Superintendent of Schools.

Prominence in Extra-Curricula Activities

Not only was there a growth in the realm of education but also in the realm of outstanding activities. As the first year in a new environment usually proves somewhat subdued, in like manner was the year 1931. However the seed was but planted only to blossom forth in years to come.

The Political History

One of the major phases of life at a great institution is the political history.

Elections

The Class of 1934 proved its capability of using the ballot intelligently in the fall of 1931. Frank Gardner was elected to his first term as president, receiving an overwhelming majority of the votes cast. Other successful candidates were Barbara Logan, vice-president; June Leslie, Secretary; and Eliot Alter, treasurer. Miss Logan and President Gardner served in the Teacher-Student Council, while Leonard Beckwith represented the class with the president in the Court of Justice. The administration had a most successful year free from the turmoil of politics.

In the fall of 1932 the class voiced their approval of Gardner's conservative policies by reelecting him president. Other members of the executive department of the junior year were Barbara Logan, vice-president; Cynthia Jones, secretary; and Joseph Hartigan, treasurer. President Gardner retained his seat in the Teacher-Student Council and the Court of Justice, while the marshals elected Henry Urrows to the former and Bertram Litman to the latter. Treasurer Hartigan so capably managed the purse strings during a year marked by bank holidays and stock market closings, that, for the first time in many years there was a large surplus.

Senior Elections

The spring of 1933 brought a number of astute "politicians" into the public eye. Competition was keen in the annual elections for Chief Justice and Captain of the Marshals. The school at large elected Richard Spears to head the judiciary while the marshals chose Bert Litman as their leader. The summer vacation failed to remove any of the ambitious schemes of the "politicians." Instead their number was doubled in September. Political deals were common, and on the third ballot the marshals elected Jean Leslie to the school's legislative body and Henry Urrows to the Court. Frank Gardner and Bert Litman were members of both bodies.

F. Streeter Gardner received an overwhelming majority in the 1933 contest for president. Edna Maddox was chosen vice-president; Cynthia Jones, secretary, and John Grandfield, treasurer. President Gardner named the following committee chairmen: Henry Urrows, Year Book; Theodore Plotkin, Class Day; Frank Taylor, Senior Dance; Mildred Friedman, Ring and Pin; Edna Hibel, Gift. Members of the Senior House had the distinction of having another set of officers, those of Senior House. Theodore Plotkin was elected President; Jean Leslie, vice-president; La Reine Gardner, secretary; and Frank Taylor, treasurer.

In February, 1933, Jean Leslie was elected president of the Girls' League with Edna Maddox, treasurer and Bernice Greenspan, secretary. La Reine Gardner was chairman of the Senior Advisors and Christine Adams of the Advisory Council. Barbara Wilder, as head chairman with Ruth Krivitsky, one of the four House Representatives, was in charge of the Home Room Representatives of the Girls' League.

The Social Life

Amusements in the years '31, '32, '33 were regarded as merely "a frivolous indulgence." However, as seniors, the class staged the first successful senior dance in the memory of the oldest faculty members. Over one hundred couples attended the event in Driscoll Hall under the leadership of Frank Taylor, chairman of the Dance Committee and his beflowered assistants, Messrs. Bonelli, Cohen, Ross. and the Misses Bradfield, Jones, and Hamilton, forever to be remembered for so remarkable a feat—a dance with a profit.

The Cultural Development

Had not Eliot Silverman, Frank Taylor and Eliot Alter as basses forged ahead in the realm of music, the Class of 1934 might have been lacking a Glee Club. Here Jerome Grossman received his first vocal lessons enabling him in later years to render with such exquisite charm "Sweet Marie."

The Sagamore

The inspirational genius of John Grandfield, Henry Urrows, and Norman Hunt on the Sagamore called to the attention of the Class of '34 a great masterpiece transformed from mere paragraphs of stale news. One-half the staff of '32 were members of '34. John Grandfield was elevated to the position of editor-in-chief at the beginning of the Junior year. In March, 1933, he was joined by Henry Urrows, managing editor; Norman Hunt, feature editor; Frances Bowser, and June Bradfield, assignment editors; Frank Taylor became business manager; Lawrence Daniels and Jerome Grossman, advertising managers; with Eliot Alter and E. Philip Levine, sports editors. The novelist of this period was Norman Hunt, the essayist, Eliot Silverman, the humorist—a toss up between Henry Urrows and Lawrie Daniels. In March, 1934, Norman Hunt assumed the chief place.

The Honorary Society

Nine members of the Class of '34 were admitted to the Honorary Society in the spring of 1933. They were, Eliot Alter, Frank Gardner, Bernice Greenspan, Jerome Grossman, Norman Hunt, Bertram Litman, Edna Maddox, Eliot Silverman, and Henry Urrows. In the fall of that year E. Philip Levine, Theodore Plotkin, and Mildred Friedman secured the coveted honor, and in the spring of 1934 Robert Kitsis, Richard Spears, John Grandfield, Nora O'Leary, June Bradfield, Jean Leslie, La Reine Gardner, Howard Lewenstein, Robert Salk, and Edna Hibel were initiated. Eliot Silverman was the president of Alpha Pi.

Dramatics

Richard Spears in 1932 introduced the class into the annual dramatics with his remarkable acting as the burglar and ambulance man. At the same time Eliot Silverman began his notable dramatic career. 1933 brought Norman Hunt into the limelight, building up to the grand climax of "Gold in the Hills" when Jerry Grossman, an undiscovered hero, made his debut well-backed by Norman Hunt, John Field, and Eliot Silverman, accompanied by the music of Robert Kitsis and Robert Beckhard. The stage hands upholding this fine performance were Richard Spears, electrician; stage manager, Joseph Flanagan and property manager, E. Philip Levine.

Prize Speaking

In 1932 Christine Adams carried away the J. Murray Kay medal at Prize Speaking with her illustrious rendition of a selection from "The Pickwick Papers." Eliot Silverman and Norman Hunt both took part that evening. In 1933 Eliot Silverman was a winner.

Clubs

Many of the members of '34 who in their underclass years held minor offices in the various clubs were elevated in their senior years to positions worthy of their distinctive talents. Norman Hunt, treasurer of the French Club in 1932, was elected president in 1933. Ruth Krivitsky, secretary of the German Club in the same year, 1932, became its presiding officer in 1933. Eliot Silverman was president of the Dramatic Society, a newly organized club which presented three one-act plays in which Arthur Glickman, Frances Bowser, Christine Adams and Eliot Silverman appeared. The Debating Society was organized with Eliot Silverman presiding. Mildred Friedman was selected by the Junior Red Cross as a delegate to the Red Cross Conference in Washington in 1933.

The Athletic History

The Class of 1934 gave to the school some of the most outstanding athletes in its history. Foremost among them were Captain "Tod" Plotkin who set a new world's scholastic broad jump record in 1934 and Alan Swartz was the N. E. A. A. U. high jump champion in 1933. Bert Litman and Howie Lewenstein also distinguished themselves on the track. Joseph Hartigan, Maxwell Van Dam, Edmund Fisher, and William Prior represented '34 in baseball. The gridiron heroes were Howard Lewenstein, Bertram Litman, Robert Richey, Maxwell Van Dam, John Linehan, Frederick Jerome, and Robert Whittier. The class contributed Charles Small, Edmund Fisher, John Crowley, James Casey, and Sid Brown to the basketball team and Robert Richey, Herbert Wein, Winthrop Steele, and Frank Gardner to swimming.

Girls' Sports

The sportswomen of 1934 had not made their appearance in any great numbers until 1932. That year marked the rise of several girls to stardom, namely: Edna Maddox, La Reine Gardner, Jeannette Silverstein, Beatrice Guiness, and Christine Adams. In 1933 Edna Maddox reached the heights in field hockey and also in basketball. Christine Adams, La Reine Gardner, and Muriel Wallace were captains of swimming. Muriel Wallace was also captain of Gym Team. Special honor was conferred upon La Reine Gardner as Head Marshal of Class Day, as well as upon Edna Maddox who as Chief Aid led the procession down the steps of the main building and onto the field. Among those whose names will be sung the loudest and longest are Edna Maddox, La Reine Gardner, Muriel Wallace, Christine Adams, and Ruth Krivitsky.

An Eye Toward the Future

In these pages we have traced the development of the Class of 1934 from an unruly swarm of immigrants fresh from the elementary schools of the town to prospective useful citizens of the United States. If the early start made in high school has any significance, '34 is destined to produce a three-term president of the country, a number of literary and dramatic celebrities, a couple of Olympic champions, more than its share of representatives in Congress, countless financial wizards, and at least a few members of the Hall of Fame. In general, it may be expected that the graduates of the Class of 1934 will make distinguished contributions to society and will be the type of citizens who will carry out in later life the principles of democracy learned at Brookline High School.

Last Will and Testament

Be it known to all: that we, the Class of 1934 of the Brookline High School in Brookline, and in the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, being of sound mind and memory, except John Field, but realizing the uncertainty of life, do make and proclaim this to be our last will and testament, hereby revoking all wills heretofore made by us.

After the payment of our just debts and funeral charges, we bequeath and devise as follows:

With grateful appreciation for all they have done for us, we leave to the Faculty this little verse, "You made us what we are today, we hope you're satisfied."

To Mr. Jewett we leave a compass to help him in his guidance.

To Mr. Gifford we leave one, carefully loaded revolver and an Opportunity Period.

To Mr. Bemis we leave one bottle of hair restorer to be taken internally.

To Coach Harry Brown we leave six fullbacks named Herman.

To Mr. Ringer we leave the inspiration for a new school song entitled, "Curricula, Curricula."

To Mrs. Potter we leave a "boloney dollar," and we'd like to see her make a sandwich out of that.

To Ben Roman's little Catherine we leave a Cicero Trot.

We leave to the Dramatic Society, to be presented next winter, the famous window drama, "Cold on the Sills."

We leave, to be placed near the Attendance Supervisors' desks, bronze tablets, bearing this inscription, "Here lie some of our best students."

Frank Gardner leaves his quality of unassuming leadership to Myron Cohen and Harry Shooshan.

Phil Levine leaves to Henry Ford his original, patented knee-action.

June Bradfield leaves the school much improved because of her presence here.

Tod Plotkin leaves Mr. Hines one large box of headache pills.

Norman Hunt leaves his superior intelligence to anyone who can bear to live with it.

Eliot Silverman leaves the foundation of the building still shaking from his last tonsilitic manifestation.

Mildred Freeman leaves to anyone who wants it a Red Cross seal with directions how to feed it.

John Grandfield and Cynthia Jones leave together.

Jordan Cohen leaves to Miss Lazelle one large bomb containg a sticker reading, "Not to be opened till Christmas."

Frank Taylor leaves to future graduating classes, the heritage of a successful Senior Dance.

Dick Spears leaves a petition to the next Chief Justice, requesting a life sentence with Ellen Ilfield.

Althea Shinners, Muriel Baer, and Beverly Potter leave their good looks to the three little pigs.

We leave a Flit gun aimed at Mr. Ober with orders to fire at Will.

To Carl Landers we leave one poison-ivy plant because he always makes rash promises.

Edna Maddox leaves her athletic ability to Betty Willis with the counsel to "Just keep on doing what she's doing."

Jerry Grossman leaves to Irene Banash a box of lollypops so that she will never be without a sucker.

Norma Rathner leaves her Southern accent to anyone who has been below the Mason and Dixon Line for at least a week.

Henry "Napoleon" Urrows leaves his magnificent stature to Dexter Hyman.

Eliot Alter leaves a pint of blood to the Sagamore in case its circulation gets weak again.

We leave Mr. Soderberg to Edna Hibel because he is Art.

We leave Jean Leslie to the University of Illinois to continue her outside activities with Whatever-His-Name-Is.

Bob Richey leaves to George Kilman one ham sandwich and his ability to pass the pigskin.

Bert Litman leaves a score of hot airs for next year's Marshal Band.

Howie Lewenstein leaves just one jump ahead of the Faculty.

Jane Shuman leaves a lawsuit against Joe Penner for stealing her war cry, "Oh, I didn't know that."

To the sporting world we leave John Crowley and Ed Fisher, two good eggs, who believe in putting everything in one basket.

We leave the rest of our Classmates still "heading for the last round-up."

We hereby and appoint as executor, Mr. K. C. Atticks, and request that he be exempt from giving any surety on his bond as such,

Signed,

THE CLASS OF NINETEEN HUNDRED AND THIRTY-FOUR.

In testimony whereof, we, the Class of 1934, have signed, published, and declared this to be our last will and testament, in the presence of the undersigned, who at our request, and in our presence, and in the presence of each other have hereto subscribed their names as witnesses to said will.

The House Plan

The fundamental plan underlying all organization and administration in the Brookline High School is the securing of what is best for the individual student. His interests are paramount. This fact assumes a greater importance with the increasing growth of the school. Three years ago the high school administration determined that mere size should not mean the giving of less attention to the individual boy or girl; that the restricted opportunities of the traditional "class" designations and distinctions should yield place to a more representative, democratic, active, and efficient organization. This reasoning led to the development of the Brookline House Plan.

At present the school is organized as four groups: Roberts, Shailer, Packard, and Akers Houses, each enrolling approximately 475 students in home rooms located in definitely assigned sections of the school building. Generally speaking, the students in each House remain with the same home-room teachers throughout their high school career. In other words, first year boys and girls who entered Roberts House this year will, with few exceptions, remain with their fellow-students and home-room teachers for at least four years. Regardless of the diploma requirements, students continue in the same social grouping and participate in various House activities. A fifth House will be organized to enroll five-year students, the fourth-year House name and House Master carrying over into the fifth year. The addition of the new House, to be called Lincoln House, will complete this part of the plan. At the end of every five years rotation begins, the fifth-year House enrolling the graduates of the grammar schools.

The purpose of the House Plan is to permit a student to assume, to a greater degree than formerly, an interested and active participation and leadership in the affairs of the school community of which he is a part. Each member of this community knows, from the beginning, that he belongs in a vital way to a tangible unit in the school. As a loyal member of this unit, or House, he pledges his loyalty to its ideals and its code. As a citizen in his group, he acknowledges his responsibilities and recognizes his duty in meeting the obligations of his citizenship. House orchestras, athletic and dramatic groups, service committees, clubs, and similar organizations provide for participation in expressing one's citizenship. House teacher-student councils, marshal forces, House and home-room officerships, and like positions, permit the assuming of leadership. In brief, it is proposed to provide ample practical ground for community interests and real life experiences.

The House names challenge attention. Each represents an individual who has contributed markedly to the advancement of the school. The ideals of each will become the ideals of the respective Houses; together with the outstanding character-building contributions of each, these ideals will furnish the impetus for the traditions of the Houses. The school is happy in the fact that Mr. Akers and Mr. Packard share the joy of assisting in forwarding the House Plan.

Advance means change. In the development of the House Plan there is making and it will continue, practical progress which will give to many the opportunities heretofore reserved for the few. The entering student is not lost in a maze of new experiences in an extremely large family. He finds in the House

Master, his home-room teacher, and the guidance counsellors, interested and sympathetic individuals who help at once to bridge what otherwise might be a wide gap between the elementary and the secondary schools. As he advances, he will become a more useful citizen, his interests will broaden, he will learn better how to meet standards, his successes will challenge further effort, his loyalty to his House will be reflected in a greater loyalty to the school. Solidarity in each House will mean greater solidarity in the school. Each student will have his part to play. Exactly as in the world at large the human equation must be the controlling factor in achieving any worth-while democratic ideal, so within the schools of today and tomorrow must the life values of actual experience replace outworn tradition.

AKERS HOUSE

Mr. Winfred C. Akers was Headmaster of Brookline High School from September, 1913 to June, 1930. He was graduated from Wesleyan University in 1893 with the degree of A.B. He taught in Holyoke, New Britain and various places before coming to Brookline. During his administration student government was instituted. The three departments, the Teacher-Student Council, the Marshals, and the Court of Justice became respectively the legislative, executive, and judicial divisions of school government. They were begun in 1918 and have been outstanding features of Brookline High School life. The Honorary Society was also developed while he was Master, and has become one of the most inspiring influences in the school. Senior House is richly honored in its real name.

PACKARD HOUSE

Mr. John C. Packard prepared for college at Wilbraham Academy, was graduated from Wesleyan University in 1886, receiving the degree of A.B. and in 1889 was made a Master of Arts with honors in Mechanics. He came to Brookline in 1890 to be Sub-Master of the High School and Head of the Science Department which latter position he now honors. From 1900 to 1901 he was acting Headmaster. He spent one year abroad in the study of European schools. He is the author of "Everyday Physics", a laboratory manual, and of sundry articles in various scientific magazines, besides being a lecturer of note on popular science. He designed the John C. Packard Laboratories which were named in his honor.

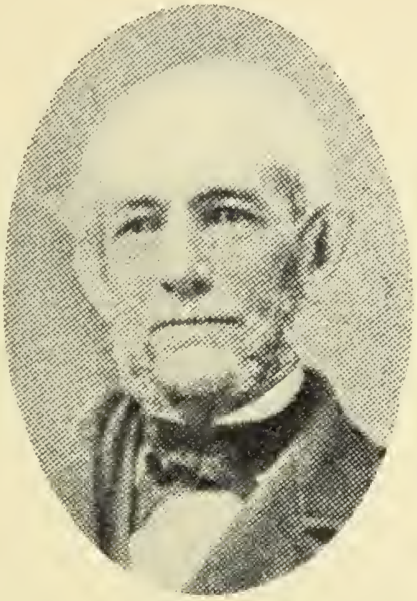
SHAILER HOUSE



The Reverend William H. Shailer spent the early years of his life in teaching. Afterwards he was graduated from Madison University in Hamilton, New York. He studied at Newton Theological Seminary nearly a year, was in control of the Literary Institute in Suffield, Connecticut, and was later ordained. He became the pastor of the First Baptist Church in Brookline in 1837. He was the moving spirit in establishing the first high school in Brookline and served as a member of the school committee fifteen years, having been its secretary for eight years and chairman when he resigned. Shailer Hall was named in his honor.

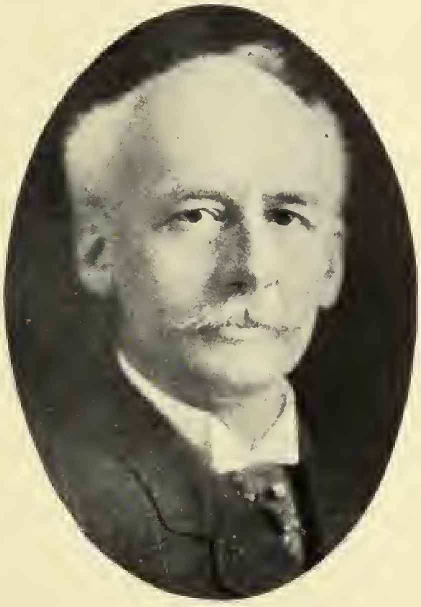
ROBERTS HOUSE



Dr. Arthur W. Roberts, for whom the Freshman House is named, was a graduate of Harvard University from which he received three degrees, A.B., A.M., and Ph.D. He was the first one to receive the last degree for only two years' work. He began teaching in Cincinnati, Ohio, later went to Penn Charter School in Philadelphia, where he remained until called to Brookline High School in 1900 to become head of the Classical Department in which he taught both Latin and Greek. The following tribute aptly describes his career here: "For a quarter of a century this great teacher poured out so copiously the riches of his natural endowment, high achievement, and ripe experience that he did much to fashion and establish noble traditions for our institution." Class Day celebration is the result of his suggestions. Roberts Auditorium is named in his honor.

The Teacher-Student Council was organized to promote a spirit of unity between faculty and students. Each month the members meet to consider together any problems or difficulties which have arisen in the lives of the student body. The council is composed of an equal number of faculty and students. The faculty representatives are chosen by the popular vote of the faculty; the student representatives are the presidents of the four houses, the captains of marshals and a representative of each house, chosen by its respective marshal force. Such a council cannot fail to bring about a mutual cooperation and understanding throughout the school.

A beautiful and inspiring ceremony distinguished the March initiation. Two members, Norma Nasmyth and Norman Hunt explained the significance of the Greek letters which symbolize the purposes and standards of Alpha Pi. As the members recited for the first time the pledge of the society, a beautiful electrically lighted emblem bearing the two letters was flashed upon the scene. This was followed by the usual presentation of the keys.

ART DEPARTMENT

AN APPRECIATION

During the twelve years the Year Book has been in the making, the Art Department of the school has rendered immeasurable service to its success.

The teachers in this department, Miss Parker, Miss Horn, and Miss Hale, have given unstintedly of their time in the most gracious, earnest, and helpful manner. They have never been too busy with their own daily tasks to give advice, suggestions, and personal service to the Year Book as well as to every other activity of the school.

To them is offered the heartfelt gratitude and appreciation of the Year Book Committee and of every teacher and pupil in Brookline High School.

Miss Reynolds

The Guidance Department wishes every student to feel free at all times to seek help in solving any of his problems. In Room 23 he will find every facility which could be arranged for his assistance;—college catalogs, special school booklets, career charts, and a special library of fine books. Any study period or after school, students are welcome. Catalogs and books may be borrowed for brief periods, provided a record is given for the same. All of these things are equally available to the pupils' parents. Any parent is welcome as a visitor and the only requirement is a definite appointment with the Director in order to receive the greatest service.

For the Freshmen, particularly, an added ease of approach and a more personal connection with the Guidance Department has been arranged. Six Counselors, one for each period of each day, offer their services, in particular to the first year pupils. There is no reason why anyone of the first year visitors need feel lost or helpless. As soon as he has discovered the name of his counselor, he will always find direct and immediate assistance awaiting him in Room 23.

The Director wishes to emphasize his earnestness for the welfare of the student. Their study problems, their athletic desires, their social interests, their college plans, their failures, their successes, their occupational interests, their hobbies—all are matters about which he concerns himself with the students alone. Confidences are respected; advice is carefully given; the truth of any situation is sought; and suggestions for future consideration are offered. Decisions are for the boy or girl or the parents to make.

Help is the duty and the desire of the Guidance Department.

In Memoriam

"An incidental greatness characterized her unconsidered ways."

In the passing of Miss Barnes, there has come into the hearts of all those who knew her a deep and abiding sense of personal loss. During her many years of service in the field of physical education, she has endeared herself to countless numbers of people. Yet in the midst of sadness, we can rejoice for having had the rare privilege of knowing her as a teacher and friend.

It is not my purpose to present the varied details of her busy career in this short article but rather to offer an interpretation of her life and to evaluate in some measure her contribution to physical education.

With other noble pioneers in her profession, Miss Barnes has taken her rightful place. She has been one of the few to blaze new trails; to leave the security of conventional paths; to rise from the traditional conceptions of education; in short, to venture on to the frontier with an undaunted courage and a far-seeing vision.

During her service in Brookline she has done much to lift physical education out of its history of "formal activities and gymnastic drills" in the classroom to that of the natural and joyous play life of children and youth. The slogan she loved so well—"A sport for every girl and every girl in sport" became a joyful reality in the rich and varied program of activities organized to meet the needs of every child.

Because of her sympathetic understanding of the child, her buoyant spirit, her ever fresh springs of interest, she was able to give abundantly to others, that they might more surely enjoy the "fullness of life."

One could not fail to recognize in the love of the little tots for their leader, in the respect and esteem of the older boys and girls, in the trust and confidence of the parents in Miss Barnes's wise council, the fact that a truly great woman was in our midst.

Not alone in our Brookline schools but in wider educational circles did Miss Barnes command the respect and attention of many great leaders.

I cannot close this article without wishing that I might tell more about my memories of Miss Barnes as a friend and teacher; about her kindness, her sense of humor, her keen personal interest in every child, her devotion and skill in the administration and supervision of her department. Surely her name will be honored by all.

"The world is better for all that her life has meant."

TRIBUTE TO BESSIE L. BARNES

The school pays its respect to Miss Bessie L. Barnes. In many respects she cannot be replaced. We all will miss her delightful manner, her cheerful smile, and her steadfast loyalty to all, which meant to the best interests of the Brookine High School. She left her impress upon all with whom she came in contact. Her high professional spirit, her devotion to her duty, her steadfast loyalty to the ethics of her profession, and the strength of her character are left to us as her heritage. Miss Barnes was one of the most loyal members of our staff.
